Health Nuts Take Note: The FDA Now Recommends Americans Think About 5 To 7 Clams Every Day

Let's face it - staying in shape is hard! You can work out, eat right and still not have the ideal beach bod that you've been craving. Well, bad news, it's about to get a lot harder.

FDA scientists have recently revealed that Americans should think about 5 to 7 clams every day!

Ugh, as if waking up to go to the gym wasn't hard enough! Now I have to set an alarm at 3:00 am and 6:00 am just so I can get my first thoughts about clams done early.

As the average American only thinks about clams a negligible 2 times a day, more than doubling that is going to be rough for most of us. Luckily, FDA spokesperson Gene Shaddle has some helpful tips on how to get your "clam thought" juices flowing. He states "an easy way to think about clams is to think about shrimp, because once you think about shrimp you will think about other seafoods and that will inevitably lead back to clams"

Another tip issued by Shaddle is to cut out unneeded thoughts that have no benefit healthwise, he explains "Most people think about their family or personal life thousands of times a day, this literally does nothing. So why not replace those thoughts with some healthy thoughts about clams!"

Not too shabby, Mr. Shaddle! Maybe with some of these tips America can be one step closer to becoming a healthy nation. Let's get those clam thoughts going people!

Global Warming FTW: Ice Age Film Exec's Say: "Impending Cataclysmic Climate Change Could Give New Plot For Fifth Film In Franchise"

After President Trump decided to pull out of the Paris Climate Accord, many Americans were left feeling hopeless about the future of the planet. When asked what it means for future generations, President Trump responded "I'll tell you what it means, it means we'll be getting a whole new plot for an Ice Age Movie!"

Wow, the nation has been waiting years for a possible plot line for an Ice Age Movie. With Ice Age already covering dinosaurs and continental drifts, many thought that there wouldn't be anything else to cover. But this announcement has given some hope to a despondent country.

Ice Age producer Lori Forte expressed supreme excitement over the potential for a new film in the animated franchise caused by humanities lack of foresight and immanent self destruction. Forte is quoted saying "it would just be so much fun to see Manny the Mammoth, Diego the Tiger, and of course my personal favorite, Sid the Sloth, drudging through a man-made apocalyptic wasteland."

Ray Romano, the voice of Manny, has started an online campaign urging fans of the franchise to do everything in their power to hasten humanities forthcoming demise. He Tweeted "ditch your Prius and trade it in for a Hummer, or one of those Hummer-Limo things if you can! Use aerosol spray, and forget about recycling! The sooner we get this thing over with, the sooner we can see Manny and the gang in a brand new adventure! #NewICEAGE"

A poll done by the Wall Street Journal showed that Americans in favor of pulling out of the Paris Climate Accord jumped to an astonishing 95% after the comments from the President. And then jumped up again to 98% when Ice Age Execs confirmed their interest in making the film.

On the opposing side, some scientists argue that they don't actually need the Earth to become uninhabitable in order for a new Ice Age movie to come out.

Uh, sorry "scientists" but that would take away from the series's reputation for sticking to true events. Try ruining something else and keep your sciency hands away from climate change.
